PIONEERING FOR RACES GAVE GREAT THRILLS

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Tanforan racing begins tomorrow (Saturday). It is but natural on the eve of the opening of the eleventh season under my control to cast a backward glance. In '26 the people of the state voted against mutuels, in '27 we failed to put over certificates and in '30 the real start was made by staging a twelve-day meeting with options as the mode of wagering.

Such a bald statement gives the reader a very poor notion of the struggle to establish the great sport; in fact, the obstacles to success seemed almost insurmountable dozens of times. Staunch friends in the county, however, never faltered under the fiercest of bombardments from the press and that most dastardly of weapons, the anonymous letter, and we finished the advertised period of sport without being put away for a spell or dumped into the middle of the Pacific. According to many opponents, some of them supposed to be sportsmen, drawing and quartering would have been mild punishment for my group.

Dr. Charles E. Jones was secretary of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association, the body under which the racing was conducted, and, working with Joe Murphy and Floyd McKenney, there was no drawing back, or even suggestion of retreat, when the attack was at its height. A typical incident was the return of advertising money by a virtuous(?) San Francisco newspaper.

A slant on the peculiarities of human nature is furnished by the circumstance that the loudest shouters at that time against home racing are at present on the bandwagon; in fact, some of the most vociferous in the denunciation are making plenty out of the sport they traduced.

I take the keenest enjoyment in making mental pictures of the happenings of those days; our group made up a happy family and I doubt if ever in the history of racing anywhere the spirit of sportsmanship ever prevailed as with us.

WPA PROJECTS DEPARTMENT SETUP BY SUPERVISORS BOARD

New Appointee Will Handle
Work Being Done In San Mateo County

A new department which will handle WPA projects in the county was set up by the Board of Supervisors at their meeting on Monday of this week. W. P. Hendricks, city engineer of Hillsborough and Belmont, was named to the office of co-ordinator at salary of $3600 a year.

The new county co-ordinator will handle all WPA projects employing county relief workers, and will give his time to attempts to get all possible WPA aid for the county.

Immediately following their action the board was warned by Ernest A. Wilson, San Mateo, attorney for Acting County Engineer Carl Scott, that, if the purpose of the new department is to interfere in any way with Scott's department, the supervisors will be held in contempt of court.

District Attorney Gilbert Ferrell advised the board that it would be legal to create the works bureau and appoint a co-ordinator provided the department did not attempt to "intrude" on the duties of Scott or to "take over or usurp" the engineering department.

Supervisor Al Witt of Daly City, in reply to the comments of the district attorney, declared that what the county board was attempting was in line with what San Francisco had done. He explained that Scott would be left in charge of all roads not classified, and that adequate machinery and equipment would be left him to maintain his department. He said all other projects would be handled by the new appointee.

Supervisors Fred Beer and John Poole were not present at the meeting, being away on vacation. However, both voted for the creation of the new bureau last week.

Townsend Club Whist

Mrs. Chesney and Mrs. Nagle co-chairmen of the whist to be held on Tuesday evening, October 15 by Daly City Unit No. 1, Townsend Club, are pleased with the way their friends are rallying to their help and donating prizes to be given away at the affair.

Help this good cause along by giving a prize to either one of these ladies, and telling your friends to patronize the game to be held in the Daly City Theater Building on Tuesday, October 15.

CITY COUNCIL HAS INTERESTING MEET

Ministers Send Letter Of Protest Against Bingo
Ordinance

Monday evening of this week the city council met, with all members answering roll call except Councilman Sundermann.

The Western Casualty & Surety Company submitted a bid for liability insurance (other than automobile) for the city in the sum of $464.32 for the premium. This to secure coverage in an amount of $10,000 and $20,000. This bid was accepted by the council, subject to approval by the city attorney of the form of policy when submitted.

A letter was read from the Jefferson Union High School Parent Teacher Association, protesting against the dust clouds arising from the gravel bunkers and also smoke from the asphalt plant adjoining the high school grounds, as a menace to the health of students of the school and residents of the district. The council instructed the city attorney to take steps at once to abate the dust nuisance and, if he finds the smoke from the asphalt plant constitutes a nuisance, to proceed against the latter establishment also.

The following letter was read from the two Protestant ministers of Daly City:

"To the Councilors of the City of Daly City, San Mateo County, California.

"We, the pastors of the Protestant churches of Daly City, the Grace Nazarene Church and the Grace Presbyterian Church, with the consent and approval of the officers of our respective churches, do solemnly protest against the recent action of the council in licensing the gambling game known as Bingo. We believe that the $4000 license fee which it is proposed to charge will never compensate for the moral injury which will result to the children and youth of our community. Daly City is a city of homes, and we cannot believe that such action by the council is such as meets with the approval of our home dwellers, and we do respectfully petition the council that such action will be taken as will lead to the rescinding of the ordinance permitting such an

SECRET SERVICE METHODS SHOWN

Film At Local Theater
Depicts Federal War On Organized Crime

Dramatic details of the government secret service in its war on organized crime; the heroism of the federal men in their perilous work, and the trailing of a public enemy, in a story based on actual facts and cases, are the thrills of "Public Hero Number 1," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new thriller at the Daly City Theater, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 3, 4 and 5.

Chester Morris as the adventurous Jeff Crane, and Joseph Calleia as the fugitive crime overlord, are the centers about which the amazing plot revolves. Lionel Barrymore adds both comedy and pathos in the principal character role, as the strange old physician, tool of the underworld, and blonde Jean Arthur, with Morris, provides the romantic interest. The excellent cast also features Paul Kelly, Lewis Stone, Paul Hurst and George E. Stone.

The sensational prison break, the stampede of a thousand convicts, the breath taking operation sequence, where the doctor performs a transfusion in a crook's hideout, the raid on the gangster stronghold, running battles between fast automobiles, and other exciting details embellish the story as the audience follows the federal men in their dangerous task.

On the same program, "Paris in Spring" with Tullio Carminati and Ida Lupino.

ROOSEVELT ENEMIES FLOUNDERING ABOUT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

There is music in the affairs of men which one may take one's part in or which one may spoil—Plato.

Jim Farley had the opponents of the Roosevelt administration spinning around on their heads helplessly recently when he delivered a straightforward, logical address on the New Deal and its significance. The bugaboo of an attack by the president on the constitution was disposed of by a denial the chief executive ever dreamed of an onslaught on the basic law of the land and furthermore it was up to the people themselves to amend the constitution or change it as they did in repealing the Eighteenth Amendment.

As to the opposition to the fundamental tenets of the present national regime, Farley said it was coming from isolated minorities, sniping from ambush, each intent on promoting its own selfish interests.

The Postmaster General defied the opposition to deny that in 1933 Mr. Roosevelt took over a government which had almost ceased to be a going concern and that employment business activity, property values and hope itself were at an all-time low.

It was pointed out that through the vigorous acts of the administration thousands of sound banks have been opened and set to performing their natural functions; insurance companies have been helped to solvency; railroads have been saved from receivership, and many industries have been supplied with working capital.

The latest of the maneuvers of the Fascist press is to put its women writers to work espousing the tooth and claw philosophy. In one of the outbursts the columnist tells us that under Fascism, as she calls our capitalistic economy, every American citizen, from bootblack to millionaire, gets his chance. In this anti-Roosevelt paper we read:

"Life isn't a parlor game. It doesn't coddle or play favorites, but demands each man play his own hand and take the odds—or else.

"This is, as Heaven knows, no defense of greed. But could any practice be more unfair or demoralizing than a sudden, hysterical demand that someone protect us from the Bogey Man and make the Big Boys play pretty?"

It's the old contention about a bit of order in our social structure and reduction in the millions of unemployed leading to softness. But as President Roosevelt's plans for rehabilitation show we either have to take a chance of losing a little of our fierceness in our personal striving for fortune or lose out altogether as a nation.

Anthony Dimond, delegate from Alaska to Congress, is working out plans for a campaign to make Alaska as well known throughout the United States as it is on the Pacific Coast. He has been active lately in obtaining action by the WPA on Alaskan projects for which applications have been filed.

Approximately $670,000 will be used in carrying out a scheme for the construction of roads in connection with the Matanuska colony.

On his return to Alaska from Washington, Dimond will visit all the centers of population in the territory. He plans to urge the various communities to unite in taking advantage of the interest around in Alaska the past two years by the people of the whole country.

CROCKER SCHOOL WORKER INJURED

The first serious accident in connection with the construction of the new schools occurred at an early hour, Thursday morning of this week.

The unfortunate victim is Jack Kester of Westlake avenue, who was operating the electric saw on the Crocker School grounds. His hand was nearly amputated.

The victim was rushed to the Villa Sanatorium in the local police car for treatment. From there he was removed to St. Mary's Hospital. At present writing he was too ill to be questioned about particulars.

RACEGOERS ARE TO WITNESS KEEN RIDING DISPLAY

Some Of Best Jockeys In Country To Match Skill
On Local Course

Racegoers may anticipate thrills galore in the riding contest which must inevitably develop this season between Jockey Ralph Neves and Apprentice Danny Brammer. Neves, one of the most sensational riders ever developed in the West, only this summer skyrocketed to No. 1 position as the leading jockey of the entire country, alternating with Jockey Wayne Wright throughout the summer for this honor. Neves was in front at the close of the recent Longacres meeting in Seattle. He went from there to Detroit and started out in great style but his riding was cut short by a thirty-day suspension meted out by the stewards.

Apprentice Brammer, who will be here for the opening of the twenty-seven-day fall meeting, October 5, will have a head start, as Neves will not be permitted to ride until October 13. Neves, however, is a rider who "comes from behind." This was attested here last season when he overtook his rivals and won the gold wrist watch offered as the prize for the leading rider by J. W. Marchbank, directing owner of the San Bruno course.

Too, Brammer will have another advantage—his five pound apprentice allowance. Neves lost his "bug" at Longacres, but he rode just as brilliantly without the weight concession. Brammer has been hailed as the outstanding reinsman in modern Chicago turf history and was the leading rider at Arlington Park, winning his laurels against the outstanding booters of the country. He was runner-up at Lincoln Fields and has been the sensation of the current Hawthorne meeting, riding four winners in a single afternoon recently.

Historic Tanforan, which has furnished the racing state for the saddle performances of such immortal pigskin artists as Tod Sloan, "Ice-man" Spencer, Winnie O'Connor and other heroes of the past, again will furnish Pacific Coast racegoers with a sparkling array of riding talent. A partial list of the reinsmen who will be seen in action here includes R. Neves, D. Brammer, V. Thompson, H. Simmons, A. Gray, B. Thornton, L. Hyder, R. Leischman, P. Petrella, D. McCown, W. Molter, L. Arnold, M. Sielaff, D. Neal, F. Wilbourn, M. Wilber, E. Stalling, W. Robertson, G. Williams, B. Matt, W. Schuling, R. Colpitts, C. Schultz, N. Richardson, R. Sperry and J. Inzelone.

PIONEER MATRON DIES SUDDENLY

Expires From Hemorrhage
While Seated In Chair
Alone In Home

A pioneer matron of Daly City died suddenly in her home, alone, Tuesday morning of this week. Death came to Mrs. Minnie E. Noble, of 3668 San Jose Avenue as the result of a hemorrhage, caused by a ruptured vein in the leg.

The popular matron was found seated at the telephone, where she had gone in a desperate effort to summon aid. She was beyond medical aid when help arrived. Mrs. E. Lohr, the district school nurse, who resided with Mrs. Noble, came home at noon time and found the woman dead, seated in a chair at the telephone. The interior of the home was covered with blood from one end to the other. Mrs. Lohr, notified the members of the local police department. When the officer arrived at the Noble home Mrs. L. D. Pepper the deputy coroner was notified, and took charge of the remains.

Deceased is survived by two children, James M. and William T. Reed; a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Maasbeig, and a brother, Robert Moor.

Mrs. Noble was a member of Eastern Star, Occidental Chapter No. 280; Forrester's Vista Grande Circle No. 253, and Ladies Loyal Orange Lodge No. 120. The funeral will be conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Company, under the auspices of the Occidental Chapter of O. E. S. No. 280 this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

The local police were twice given the wrong address, hence considerable delay was caused in their arrival. It would be well if persons calling the department were more careful to give the proper location when seeking assistance.

JOTTINGS FROM THE LOCAL FIELD

Clifford Fields who is in the aviation department of the U. S. Marines in Coronada, is enjoying a month's furling visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fields of Risel street.

George R. Augustein of Evergreen avenue left, early Wednesday morning, on a business trip down the peninsula going as far south as Monterey.

Miss Ida Dixon of Woodrow street and Miss Clara Gosselin of San Francisco were luncheon guests, Saturday, of Mr. Ora Mayer, at the States Cafe in San Francisco. Mr. Mayer recently won the world bowling championship.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Murphy of San Francisco were dinner guests, Sunday, at the home of Mr. Murphy's mother, Mrs. Mary Murphy of Hanover street.

Mrs. M. Rogers of Oakland spent the past week visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. Linhares of Knowles avenue.

Mrs. Mary Conci of Parkview avenue entertained a group of friends, Wednesday evening of last week, at an evening of bridge, having as guests Mesdames Myrtle Grasse, Madeline Ferro, Virginia Webb, Agnes Jakobs, Misses May Costello, Mary O'Connor, Verna Conci, Mary Caulfield and May Burke.

Pete Conci, of Parkview avenue, manager of the Shell oil station on Mission street, was confined to his home, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, suffering with a severe cold.

Marino Puccini of Mission street was returned to the hospital, Tuesday of this week, suffering with an attack of pneumonia.

EMPLOYMENT MUST BE ACCEPTED IF OFFERED

Refusal to accept employment in private industry by relief workers will result in their immediate removal from the county rolls, Captain L. G. McAloney, relief director, said today, as he reiterated a stand being taken throughout the nation.

At the same time he urged all private citizens to report relief workers who refuse employment.

evil in our midst. We believe that the time has come when there should be a solemn protest on the part of those who believe in higher standards of life and who approve of high moral standards and who disapprove of vice, to raise their voices in protest of this action of our City Council.

"Respectfully yours,
"REV. J. MERRITT GILL,
"REV. JOHN R. STEVENSON,
"Sept. 24, 1935."

Upon inquiry as to whether the ordinance in question could be rescinded, Mayor Smith answered in the affirmative. Councilman Fahy then moved that the ordinance be rescinded. There was no second to this motion, hence the matter was laid over for further consideration.

Attention of the city engineer was called to cracks and ruts in the pavement on certain city streets, with instructions to remedy these defects, and to secure federal aid on the work if possible.

A 600 candle power street light was ordered installed at the signal crossing on Mission street, the light to be provided with a reflector. Superintendent Bodien was requested to report the cost of installing a pedestrian light at the same point and its feasibility.

The chairman of the street committee of the council was asked to confer with the city engineer of San Francisco with a view to speeding the proposed work of widening San Jose avenue.

Fire Chief Chesney recommended delay in the matter of a prohibitive ordinance against fireworks until such time as a uniform law for all county municipalities can be drawn.

The council adjourned to meet on the next regular meeting date, October 14.

Floral Decorated Children Of County Schools To Be Seen In Huge Parade

A garden more than 100,000 square feet in area, all under cover, with the best of the $8,000,000 annual bouquet of cut flowers that are shipped from San Mateo County every year on display, will be the major feature of the San Mateo County Products and Floral Fiesta.

The huge display will be held in the picturesque Bay Meadows race track, situated about midway between Redwood City and San Mateo, and between the Bay Shore Highway and El Camino Real, and easily accessible to both. The dates are October 11, 12 and 13, with a preview on Thursday evening, October 10, which is to be sponsored by a group of prominent peninsula society women.

The Fiesta will include a magnificent showing of the agricultural products of the county, which produces, besides its amazing cut flower crop, more than sixty different agricultural commercial products.

A Parade of Flowers, with thousands of school children in floral costumes, flower decorated floats by the dozens and many other colorful features, will be staged on the track on Saturday afternoon, October 12. Each evening of the Fiesta there will be an elaborate pageant, with hundreds of trained dancers, a massed choral of skilled singers and excellent orchestral music accompanying well known soloists.

Polo will be the main attraction on Sunday afternoon, October 13, when, in addition to a regular game by well known men players, there will be a ladies polo match, with society women from the peninsula playing.

Additional attractions at the Fiesta will include a large display of rare birds and tropical fish, an art exhibit of garden and flower photographs, fireworks and many other interests.

Unique in similar affairs, the Fiesta will have not only the best of its commercial flowers on show, but garden clubs, amateurs, school children and cottage gardens will all be represented.

MAY ROBSON AT CURRAN THEATER

Homer Curran makes the welcome announcement that the ever-popular star, May Robson, will return to the legitimate stage when he presents the New York thrill play success, "Kind Lady," at the Curran Theater, San Francisco, for a limited engagement, opening on Monday night, October 7. Through many years, May Robson was a regular visitor to the Pacific Coast and gave performances on all its famous stages. There was no more popular star known and the fine work which Miss Robson has been doing in the cinema has served to enhance her standing and gain a host of new friends who will be eager to see this fine actress in person.

"Kind Lady," which will inaugurate the fall and winter season at the Curran Theater, is the first of a long series of dramatic and musical attractions Mr. Curran has booked for his playhouse during the season. This play was written by Edward Chodorov and he found his inspiration in a story by Hugh Walpole, "The Silver Mask." It tells of a lovely widow in London to whose home a gang of criminals gain access. They proceed to alienate her friends to secure control of her fortune. It was produced in New York last Spring and is now one of the current successes listed on the Broadway hoardings.

In addition to Ralph Forbes, who plays the villain of the play, "Kind Lady" will employ the services of William Jeffrey, Mary Forbes, Clare Verdara, Joan St. John, Douglas Blackley, Clyde Kroft, Granville Bates, Rosalind Ivan, Gene Borden, and others.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's criticism of his idle life, and withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, son of a wealthy banker, is practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. Other members of the party include an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan's dislike, Barry tells Hal that he takes at once, but he distrusts Crack. He finds his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, instead of his own, and they exchange kisses. Next day he tells her he loves her. She answers that she mustn't love him, without giving any reason. Crack brutally insults Kerrigan, and his feeling of disgust toward Crack is intensified. On his insistence, Barry tells Hal that, at her father's urging, she had married a man many years older than she, and had promised to her husband, "no matter what happened," for ten years. That was four years ago, and despite her knowledge of her husband's unworthiness, she is determined to keep her promise, though admitting her love for Hal. Next day an accident ruins the battery of the car, and the journey is halted for a time.

Then the last fence post fell apart across the low fire. Doc lay with his legs under him, sometimes raised his head from parallel forepaws to prick his ears intently into the gloom. And there was a less easy difference in the night.

"D'you s'pose that fella's building a battery?" Kerrigan murmured out of a silence; and he got to his feet in a stiff sort of aimlessness that ended in his lighting a cigarette and sitting down again.

"Hadden't honestly thought of the little—guy all night," said Hal.

He started to take his arm from Barry's waist—to shift his suddenly cramped position; but she stirred against him, murmured something, and he waited, watching for her calm again.

Then he began a more careful maneuver: in the middle of it Barry made a quick, plaintive moan, turned as if to hold him, and her sleepy whisper said, "Darling, don't go, don't go, there's time." Her eyes opened. Disappointment chased the dream out of them as she looked from him to Kerrigan, and the high moon. Then she sat up straight, her rueful smile on the last of the fire.

"So we're still here," she said. "Were there ghosts?"

"None," said Hal. "Was that what you were dreaming?"

"I think so—toward the end. Dear Kerrigan, are there ghosts?"

"I would've said," said Kerrigan in a subdued tone, "that it took a ghost to sleep as you have and wake up without a shiny nose. You're not a ghost—thank the Lord, if you'll allow me—and neither is your nose shiny. So I don't know."

She gave him a slow smile of affection through her still disappointed drowsiness: "You've never seen a real ghost?" she said.

"I've thought I was just going to—oh, several times; but maybe I was trying too hard," said Kerrigan. "Usually about this time of night. In old countries midnight's supposed to be the time; but out here, I think before dawn—just when the east begins to gray."

There was a car coming from the direction of the highway—its loose noisiness advertised over a distance. They saw a pair of dim headlights stare up and drop down again over a rise.

"Splash with our battery," said Kerrigan, subdued.

"If that's a bet I won't take it," said Hal moodily, and he looked down at Barry. She was staring into the embers, miles off in some somber thought.

The car lurched up over the rock outcrop and came to a chattering stop beside Rasputin, the motor racing under loud rattles and drummings in the old body. Neither Barry nor Kerrigan moved; Hal got up, stiff and reluctant, and went around, saying without welcome, "That you?"

"Yeah," said Crack lazily, somehow as if he had been gone a matter only of moments.

And in that dismal pre-dawn hour, with a low stain of gray across the east and the sharp, mocking flash of the air-beacon in the gloom below it, Hal was heavily oppressed by the sense of ill impending.

They were in Evanston, on the edge of Wyoming, at sunrise, with the fresh, concentrated red and blue of the restaurant's neon tubes saluting the good blue and red-gold of the crescent morning. The restaurant was in full blast, giving breakfast to two loads of eastbound bus travelers off to an early start. And Rasputin had hardly stopped before the Pulsiphers were bustling toward the door, drawing the others in their wake. Hal caught Barry's wrist as she was passing and kept her back.

She didn't cry to move away. Hal said: "It's odd how sad—almost foreboding—enchantment can be when it's going—off, away. My promise is over too—and I love you."

Barry still looked out from the abrupt edge of the town as she said, "The enchantment'll never be over."

"Barry," said Hal, "think of this for me today—before tonight. I must know where I can find your husband. I will know it if I have to follow you like a dog—everywhere you go for years; and I will see him. It'll be so much easier if you tell me. Tonight I shall come to ask you."

Dully she said: "I'll never tell you. Don't you see I have to use every cowardly thing I can think of to keep my bargain—a bargain not to anyone living, not to anyone you or I can talk to or bribe or bully, but to some one who is dead—my father? Don't you see that?"

"I don't see it," said Hal, quietly secure. "Your father deceived you, cheated you. This man he gave you to is not to be considered, except as an animal in the way. If your father is anywhere now, he knows he cheated you, and he's paying for it until you release him. If he's—not anywhere, it doesn't matter. It's between us—no one else."

She tugged at her held arm once, not to get it from him but to make a gesture of hopelessness. "It isn't that way; I know it isn't that way, Hal, and I have to live with myself."

"You don't," Hal interrupted in low-voiced authority. "You have to live with me."

She looked off into the east, with dark, sullen things trying to soil the blue bravery of her eyes. Then she turned calmly to him and said in husky listlessness: "I'll live with you, after we get to Los Angeles. For a week, I'll go with you somewhere and live with you."

He watched her level, heavily-lidded look of reproach without speaking, waiting for her to show him a trace of warmth behind it, waiting for her to see in his eyes the strength she would have later to meet and fall before. "Not good enough, Barry," he said. "D'you think that after a week I'd let you go—any sooner than I will now?"

"You might," she said dully; and by a quick turn of her head she evaded the issue his unsmiling eyes forced upon her. "Let's go to breakfast."

As they ran out of Wyoming in the dry, growing heat, Hal became more uncomfortably aware of the division in him, as if there were two people behind the jiggling wooden wheel. One was grown illogically grim in self-persuasion of power, able to wipe off sticking webs of weariness and premonition, but unable to turn where they didn't touch and stick again. The other was a light, unattainable shell of personality, with a saving nimbleness that effected talk and laughter with Kerrigan, quick mourning for a murdered porcupine at the roadside, recurrent pleasure in the twitching alertness, the busy running, of the fat-bellied gophers.

They were in Salt Lake City near nine o'clock, and Mrs. Pulsipher said it would be a wicked waste not to be able to say they'd seen the Temple while they were here. The avenue up which they turned had clear water running lavishly in both gutters; and tall trees on either side.

"That's the Temple," Mrs. Pulsipher said in sudden energy. "That's the Temple, Mr. Kerrigan."

They passed the stiff, gray facade with its tiers of arches. Hal thought vividly of Crack, there behind him, looking straight down the street that would take them between the files of tall trees, pleased in his private waiting, as if the trees were an omen for him. After lunch, if Barry wouldn't sit in front with him, Hal would have Crack there—where he could look at him, see his expression, talk to him, and finish the narrow little guy's alien linkage with that undetermined sense of ill.

They stopped for lunch in Fillmore, halfway down the length of Utah, and on Kerrigan's map the three hundred-odd remaining miles to Las Vegas looked long and sorrowless to Hal—to be covered before night and his final, imperious siege of Barry.

Crack, beside him, looked up from his own scrutiny of the map and, with a shy smile at Mrs. Pulsipher, said: "Las Vegas? Too far. We had plenty of ridin' today already."

The insinuation, somehow, of placing himself in assured opposition nettled Hal like open insolence, and he dismissed all thought of the tedium in pushing on. "You don't have to drive," he said casually. "All you have to do is sit. If any of the ladies are tired, we'll stop as soon as they want to."

Mrs. Pulsipher asked how far Las Vegas was, and when Crack told her, she looked grimly familiar with impositions and supposed that if anybody was in a great hurry, the others would have to keep on, too.

"Who-who's in a hurry?" John asked her out of sudden perplexity. "Don't ask me," said Mrs. Pulsipher. "I am," said Hal quietly.

Sister Anastasia, her faintly worried eyes smiling a little at Hal, said: "Because I asked, Mr. Ireland told me we would be in Los Angeles tomorrow. Perhaps he believes I must be there then. It is not necessary. It would be better to stop this afternoon and rest. We are all tired—Mr. Ireland especially, I think."

Hal denied it, but the nun's gentle diffidence persuaded Mrs. Pulsipher he was showing a nobility which he certainly hadn't room to feel. Then Kerrigan pointed out that if they stopped the night at Saint George, at the bottom of Utah, there was little more than four hundred miles left to Los Angeles and they'd be there tomorrow anyway. Hal glanced at Barry, saw her remote in her own disturbing thoughtfulness, and gave in. Even as he spared a silent "D—n your little meddling" for Crack's gratified quiet beside him, he knew he could not come too quickly to the dispersal of those clouds in the precious bravery of Barry's eyes.

The prospect of the short afternoon lifted a gaiety in the car again; and the presentiments of coming ill withdrew a little to wait for Hal just beyond the fringes of sense. Barry was in the front seat where he could make sure of her clear, living reality whenever the need touched him. And, with Kerrigan cheerfully joining them from behind, they welcomed together the impersonal things of the route.

They talked about the good names, and what the dickens you could do with them besides taste them in your mouth and your fancy: Spanish Fork, on the road behind; and from Kerrigan's map, Hurricane and Enterprise, Gunlock and Solitude, Searchlight, Orderville, and Antimony.

From the back seat John Pulsipher wistfully ventured, "That's kinda beautiful out there"; and Mrs. Pulsipher said, not quite so severely as she might have, "If they think it's pretty, they can see it is without you telling 'em."

"No harm sayin' it," said John gently.

"No harm keepin' quiet, either," said his wife.

"Why don't you then?" said John, with the quick air of throwing a snowball and the h—l with the consequences.

Before Mrs. Pulsipher could summon a retort, the nun's soft, reverent voice said, "It is very beautiful." Hal made her say the words over again in his head, not to find out how their simplicity gave him valor, but to feel the warm stimulant of that simple gift, to fix in his heart new and certain strength. In his impetuous assault upon Barry's captivity he would have Sister Anastasia's blessing. He had been a fool to let that foreboding hour before dawn dog his infallibility so far through the bright day. He was master of himself; he was somehow master of beauty, of events, of spaces even wider, clearer, more superbly colored than the incredible nobilities that stood there defying the sun. He could blend the savage temper of such a red, ancient cliff with the pure, devout acquiescence of Anastasia's heart, and make will an instrument to discipline his stars.

Hal, in helping the clerk up with the luggage, made sure that Barry had a room to herself. And after supper, calm in his assurance of strength, he didn't bother her going upstairs with Sister Anastasia. Later he would find her, when the others were in bed and the little hotel was quiet.

Through the plate-glass window—a proscenium upon the street for the rank of oak-and-leather rocking chairs in the lobby—Kerrigan saw a "star" of the screen, in a highly becoming absent-mindedness about clothes, advertised outside the movie opposite.

"I could learn to love that little girl," said Kerrigan, a sparkle of pleasure in his eyes. "Go?"

The friendly shirt-sleeved man behind the ticket window advised them to turn south inside the door, because the south aisle was cooler. So they turned "south," in a room not larger than Frederick Ireland's downtown office; but it wasn't appreciably cooler and a slide blandly informed them that the "star" was coming next week. So after half an hour of gangster routine, they went to stroll in the gathered evening.

The wide, treeless main street of Saint George still breathed heat; but Hal pleasantly, almost proprietarily recognized in it the relaxed grace that American villages wear well, after dusk.

"Ever drink?" said Kerrigan. "No—I know you don't want one; I can always tell when a man's going to explain that he doesn't feel like a drink, and it always makes me a little sad."

"It's so d—n hot," said Hal apologetically. "And besides—"

"Ah, yes, besides," Kerrigan murmured. "What time's your audience?"

"In a little while," said Hal.

Saying that, and still sure of the sharp invincibility that armed him, he yet felt the hollow, nervous emptiness under his chest, the live, almost child suspense of the middle that comes in the imminence of great possibilities. He drew breath, and it didn't fill the emptiness. He looked at his watch and stopped, saying, "Now, I guess, Colonel. Pray for me a little, or drink at me, or something, will you?"

"I will, sir," said Kerrigan gravely. "If you should want company later, my door'll be open and I sleep light. Night, sport—and luck." It was as if he also said, I wish to God I could help you. And Hal was somehow oddly reluctant to leave him.

There was only one light in the lobby, and the clerk was locking a drawer at the desk. He looked up and said, "Your name Ireland?"

"Yes," said Hal, over quick, repressed apprehension.

"Message for you," said the clerk, and handed him an envelope.

He thought he would have guessed it was Barry's hand in any case—the characters frank, large, and fearlessly curved. "Hal," he read; "There's no good in it, truly. Everything you say will only hurt; and if it hurts more, I shall die. Leave me alone, dear darling, for both our sakes. Except to-morrow, in daylight—before it all has to end. Barry."

JELLY IS BETTER WHEN PREPARED IN SMALL LOTS

"Make jelly in small lots. Use a large, flat-bottomed saucepan. Carry the entire process through promptly." These are tips on jelly-making from women in the bureau of home economics who for years have studied the behavior of fruit juices and sugar when combined to make jellies.

An ideal jelly, they say, has a bright color, delicate flavor, and a translucent texture. It holds its shape when turned out on a plate, but quivers when the plate is moved. Perfect jelly should be so tender that it cuts easily with a spoon, yet shows a sharp face.

Such jellies cannot be produced in wholesale amounts. When extracting the juice, it is easiest to prepare and handle about 6 quarts of currants or berries of 8 pounds of apples or grapes at a time. Large masses of fruit pulp drip too long and the bags are not handled easily.

In cooking the juice and sugar together it is important to reach as rapidly as possible the point where the sirup will jelly. This is the reason a large, flat bottomed saucepan is best—evaporation takes place more rapidly from a broad surface. When the jelly stage is reached, cooking must be stopped immediately, the sirup skimmed and put promptly into hot, sterilized glasses to set. Prolonged cooking affects the flavor and color and sometimes the jelling power of the juice.

It sometimes is better to use more than one drip bag. If there is a large amount of fruit on hand, a fresh lot can be prepared and cooking started as soon as the first lot has finished dripping. Some fruits are so rich in jelly-making power that two extractions of juice can be made from the same fruit. These may be mixed.

Husband Seekers Taxed

The shortage of marriageable men at Inguyen, China, has become so acute that young women must pay $5 to the city for permits to seek mates. The levy is called the "young woman's tax." If a woman marries without such a permit she is liable to fine and imprisonment.

ST. BERNARD KING

Belvidere, the greatest St. Bernard dog ever seen in this country was imported in 1892 by E. B. Sears of Boston, who paid $6,900 for the animal.

GOOD ROADS TO MINES

The Good Roads League at its recent Harrison Hat Springs meeting, adopted a very sensible resolution presented by the Chamber of Mines, suggesting to the Minister of Public Works that roads serving mining districts be given serious consideration as public works that will not only allay unemployment but result in self-supporting highways.

Particular attention was directed to three roads serving districts now producing heavily—Nelson to Sheep Creek; Quesnel to Barkerville, and Shalalth to Bridge River.

These three areas are currently producing at the rate of approximately $9,000,000 worth of new gold each year—seventy-five per cent of the total output of the province.

The gold mining industry has brought more new capital into the province than any other in recent years and will doubtless continue to do so if government does its full part in making producing and unprospected fields more readily accessible.

More mines mean more payrolls. Mining means production of the one commodity that has universal and immediate sales value.

The resolution adopted by the Good Roads League should be endorsed by other organizations. It deserves early Government action.—Vancouver Sun.

PRESIDENT TAKES GREAT INTEREST RED CROSS WORK

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, now in the Pacific Coast territory where he is scheduled to visit the San Diego Exposition, manifests keen interest in the American Red Cross, of which he is also President.

In a message to Admiral Cary T. Grayson, national chairman, and all Red Cross workers, President Roosevelt says:

"There is no activity in which I am more deeply interested than in the work of the Red Cross. Wherever people suffer, the Red Cross responds to the call with help and comfort. The Red Cross is not sectional, it is not even national, it favors no race and no creed but goes forth in the face of any obstacle with the sole purpose of relieving human distress. The work of this great organization has grown and now includes a program of activity designed to prevent accident, illness and misery. This program should be encouraged and expanded for the protection of human life and happiness."

With the arrival of President Roosevelt in Coast territory, completion of plans to hold 41 Regional Roll Call Conferences prior to the annual enrollment of Red Cross members, which will be held November 11 to 28, has been announced.

The regional meetings will present to each state the need for enrolling 600,000 members in the Pacific Area, in response to Admiral Grayson's call for 5,000,000 members throughout the nation.

Red Cross executives in the Pacific Area, joined by chairmen of State Roll Call Committees and local chapter leaders in the several states comprising the area, will present the Red Cross achievements of the year.

The 41 regional Roll Call Conferences have been arranged in four circuits, opening October 10 and continuing until November 8.

LOCAL ATHLETE IS STOCKTON STAR

A report from Stockton says that Hubert Capps, former Jefferson Union High School athlete of Daly City, appears to be developing into one of the best backfield possibilities on Coach Jim Corson's College of the Pacific frosh football squad. Although handicapped at the start of practice drills by an ankle injury sustained in a motorcycle accident, Capps has been rounding into form rapidly with the Tiger Cubs and will probably see plenty of action at the fullback post.

Capps is a heady football player with a pair of powerful legs that should carry him far when he graduates to the Bengal varsity next season. With his ankle improving, his speed is also pepping up and he seems to have a natural ability for backing up the line and blocking.

USE SECOND GEAR

When traveling down grade, particularly when moving slowly in heavy traffic, it is best to use second gear because it offers more effective braking and saves brake lining.

"ANYTHING GOES" BETTER PICTURE OF ECONOMICS

The Most Tuneful Musical Comedy In 10 Years

"Anything Goes," the Cole Porter musical comedy sensation which bubbles with youth, zooms with speed, shouts smartness, and flashes wit, will be the attraction extraordinary at the Geary Theater in San Francisco starting Monday night October 14.

George Murphy, Shirley Ross, and Hugh O'Connell head the company of 70 in the production, said to be the most expensive and ambitious musical ever attempted in California. Fresh beautiful faces, whirlwind dancers, spotless costumes emulating the 1936 trend, well trained voices, and massive, modern backgrounds, combine to win for "Anything Goes" the title of No. 1 entertainment of the land, displaying unprecedented pep, personality and speed.

The fast and funny story, embellished by tantalizing Cole Porter tunes, is all about a mix-up in the love affairs of young American heiress (Vicki Cummings), an English peer (G. P. Huntley Jr.) a youthful New York broker (George Murphy) and a night club hostess (Shirley Ross) who has given up being an evangelist for the larger opportunities of Broadway. Then there is a fleeing racketeer (Hugh O'Connell) who is deeply hurt because he is merely Public Enemy No. 13. Much of the action takes place on a luxurious trans-Atlantic liner, and features such song hits as "You're the Top," "I get a Kick Out of You," "Blow Gabriel Blow," brilliantly interpreted by an orchestra of 25.

Another feature of "Anything Goes"

Approximately 150 members of the Seventeenth District, C. C. P. T., interested in the problem of raising living standards, and under the leadership of Mrs. R. D. Richards, president, enrolled in the "Consumers Education" course being conducted at the San Mateo Junior College. These classes are under the direction of Miss Loda May Davis, faculty member, and are to be held every Tuesday at 9 to 10 a. m. at the college.

This first lecture was intended to give a better picture of the situation which confronts the consumer in the United States. The course would teach economics from the view of the consumer rather than from the producer's end.

In discoursing on this difficult subject, Miss Davis stepped on nobody's toes. The lecture was also built around "How difficult it is to be an intelligent buyer of today." "How are we to get to the point where we can produce for use instead of for profit and how can we reach the people looking at the problem from the view of the consumer?"

Immediately following the class in "Consumers Education," John Illiff conducted a class in parliamentary law, which was also well attended. These classes are open to any one who wishes to take advantage of them and there is no charge.

which has theatergoers talking in the stage setting, most elaborate and expensively constructed since the spectacular "Ben Hur" chariot race effect. There are nine changes of scene in the non-stop action.

HOLD ANNUAL CONFERENCE WITH GOOD RESULTS

Many Interesting Topics Are Discussed At Coastside
Business Session

The annual coastside conference of Seventeenth District, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, was held at the Pescadero High School on Friday of last week, from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., with an attendance of approximately 150 members, representing the forty-two units scattered throughout San Mateo County.

In honor of the occasion, the auditorium of the school was uniquely decorated. On the stage was displayed a large ship made entirely of gold and brown colored straw flowers, a screen of cat tails being most effective, while the speakers' tables were decorated with a profusion of varicolored dahlias and zinnias. Usherettes in white, yellow and blue costumes made by the student sewing class, seated guests and distributed copies of a special welcome number of the "Cornelian," the high school paper, issued in honor of the day.

Boy Scouts opened the program with the pledge of allegiance and children of the elementary grades presented a "Welcome" skit, entitled "The Melting Pot." Mr. Edwin Willman, principal of Pescadero High School, in expressing appreciation of the conference, stated that the Parent Teacher Association constitutes the balance wheel of the entire educational structure. "How the P. T. A. Helps Americanize Our Children" was the topic discussed by Mr. E. Johnson, principal of the elementary schools of Pescadero. Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, superintendent of schools of San Mateo County, received an ovation. Miss Abbott spoke with enthusiasm of the interest taken in the mental and physical welfare of the children in the coastside schools and said it was inspiring to visit any of the schools just as a casual visitor, advising members to take advantage of the opportunity.

Mrs. R. D. Richards, president of the district, led in a discussion of the pertinent facts contained in the new state year book and mentioned the amount of work accomplished by holding the annual conference. Mrs. Richards also held a one hour "question box," and many interesting discussions came before the house.

Advising members to be sure and obtain a copy of the new program planning booklet issued by the State Congress, Mrs. A. M. Jeppson, first vice president and director of programs, gave a short talk on program themes.

The following chairmen explained the procedure of their departments: Mrs. Helen Gethan, magazines; Mrs. Myrtle I. Owens, membership; Mrs. S. E. Day, publicity; Mrs. C. S. Howler, life memberships; Mrs. Edward Simpkins, standards and goals; Mrs. A. S. W. Grundy, juvenile protection.

Miss Clara B. Dills, county librarian and district chairman home reading, displayed a large number of books dealing with hobbies, parental education, management of young children, correcting speech, speech defects and correction, thrift, child adjustment and developing attitudes in children. Miss Dills also discussed children's books. Mrs. E. I. Bartlett, state chairman home reading, spoke briefly on "Keep silence, keep sweet, keep stepping."

Solos were rendered by Mrs. Jay Steele of Pescadero, and community singing was under the direction of Mrs. Lyle D. Wise, accompanied by Mrs. Bandtel, district co-director of music.

CRACKED CYLINDERS

A cracked cylinder may cause misfiring or overheating of the automobile engine, it is said. If the crack is on the inside it is usually difficult to locate, and its effect may be apparent, due to expansion, only when the engine is hot.

One method of detecting the crack is to fill the radiator with water, run the engine until hot, then stop it and turn the crank by hand against the compression in each cylinder. At the same time have someone observe the water in the radiator. If there is a crack, bubbles should appear, due to compression in the affected cylinder forcing air into the radiator.

CHRONOLOGY OF OCTOBER MONTH

(By Maude Larue Ives)

October is the tenth month of the year, and in temperate climates one of the most beautiful of all the months. In early Roman times it was the eighth month of the year and its name is from the Latin word for eight. Julius Caesar revised the calendar and it was given its present place.

In country or woodland regions, the land is gorgeous with the changing foliage with its colors of crimson, russet and gold, and even the somber pine forests are lighted here and there by the yellow torches of birch trees. Goldenrod and wild asters still make the roadside gay, and the fringed gentian rivals, in its unassuming beauty, the spring flowers.

October 12 has a very special interest to both Americas, for on that day through the discoveries of Columbus, began a new life and history for the western hemisphere. But the day of days for children in this month is Halloween, which falls on the last day of the month. Halloween, the evening of October 31, is a time of gayety and pranks for young people, a night to play at being witches, ghosts and fairies. The building of bonfires, cracking of nuts, bobbing for apples floating in tubs of water, and telling of fortunes and ghost stories, which are now Halloween customs, are all relics of paganism.

About thirteen centuries ago, pagans celebrated November 1 as All Spirits' Day, when spirits, both good and evil, were believed to be on earth. The Druids also celebrated their harvest festival about that time, and many strange ceremonies were performed. Even after the pagans embraced Christianity, they still observed many of their old customs, including those which have survived as the Halloween diversions of today. In past years the ceremonies peculiar to the occasion in Scotland were of a highly superstitious nature, and Burns humorously described them in his poem, "Halloween."

"Then your apples all is gathered, and the ones a feller keeps

Is poured around the cellar floor in red and yellow heaps;
And your cider-makin' 's over, and your wimmern-folks is through
With their mince and apple butter, and their souse and sausage too!

I don't know how to tell it—but ef sich a thing could be
As the Angels wantin' boardin', and they'd call around on me—
I'd want to 'commode' 'em—all and whole-indurin' flook—

When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock!"—Riley

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." These words from Jeremiah comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, October 6, 1935, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Unreality." Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; . . . As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world . . . Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear" (Matt. 13: 38, 40, 43).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "The seed of Truth and the seed of error, of belief and of understanding,—yea, the seed of Spirit and the seed of matter,—are the wheat and tares which time will separate, the one to be burned, the other to be garnered into heavenly places" (p. 535).

VIEWPOINTS OF CONSUMER TOLD

One of the most important announcements at the annual coastside conference of Seventeenth District, C. P. T., at Pescadero last Friday, was made by Mrs. J. J. Garland, district chairman of P. T. A. in the high schools and president of Sequoia Union High School Unit, that, commencing Tuesday, October 1, in the choral room of the music wing of Sequoia High School, at 11 a. m., the first lecture of a course of ten lessons in "Consumers Education" will be held under the direction of Miss Loda May Davis, Economic Department of the San Mateo Junior College. Mrs. L. G. Owen, Seventeenth District chairman of parent education, and trustee of San Mateo Junior College, will introduce Miss Davis.

The Sequoia Union High School Parent Teacher Association and the Adult Education Department of San Mateo Junior College are sponsoring these lectures, which are to constitute a study of any form of home buying from the consumers viewpoint, rather than from the producer's end.

HITCH-HIKING FLY SPREADS DISEASE

The common house fly is a hitch hiker. However, the fly doesn't bother to jerk a thumb and ask a ride; it flies into moving autos or even trains or airplanes without permission and often travels hundreds of miles before leaving its chosen vehicle.

This habit of flies traveling great distances on other power than their own has made local fly eradication campaigns less effective than the campaigners hoped. Cases have been found where a fly carried disease germs on its legs and body for miles and infected people in the community where it settled. No previous cases of the disease were in existence in the new community and health authorities could find no other source of infection than flies.

failed to instill a proper fear of the house fly in the average mind. However, a more thorough knowledge of the habits of a fly would increase the respect for this tiny insect, according to authorities on the subject.

Decent cleanliness in any home requires protection against the menace of flies. Whether a fly is home-born or a hitch-hiking visitor, he is a danger. Fortunately, an effective fly-killing program can be conducted in any home by the use of a reliable fly spray containing an ample quantity of Pyrethrins, a product derived from Pyrethrum flowers, which is death to flies, when sprayed in a fine mist.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

The management of Bayonne Consolidated Gold Mines, operating on Summit Creek, 23 miles from Tye, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, west of Lake Kootenay, has decided after much investigation to construct hydro-electric plant on Summit Creek, instead of using Diesel power.

Because of its situation in a region not explored intensively and the results that have attended exploration, the Mazama Queen group of three claims and a fraction on the west slope of Goat Peak, three and one-half miles from Mazama postoffice, Okanogan county, is eliciting interest.

In a preliminary inspection, John P. Isaacs, a mine examiner, reports having seen stringers of sulphide four inches to 12 inches wide and reported to have contained as high as 350 ounces of silver and $28 in gold to the ton.

A well-known metallurgical engineer has recently thoroughly tested the plant of Ymir Yankee Girl Gold Mines, Ymir camp, Nelson district, and has recommended changes costing around $2000.

He believes that with these improvements the per-ton recovery will be largely increased. Already, arrangements have been made for installation of devices, including blankets, to save free gold values.

July results showed great improvements over former months, total recovery being between $30,000 and $31,000 gross and it is expected that with contemplated improvements installed, gross monthly recovery will be brought up to figures approaching the first estimates of around $40,000.

During July 50-ton Hadsell mill of Kootenay Belle Gold Mines, Sheep Creek camp, Nelson district, ran 24 days, losing the last seven days of the month, during which new linings were installed in buckets and chain drive repaired.

The recovery from 1057 tons delivered to mill was 397.23 ounces gold and 160 ounces was recovered from clean-up, making total of over 503 ounces, worth $17,102 at $34 an ounce.

Mill handled an average of 44 tons daily. Deducting tonnage left in mill bin, average per ton recovery works out at around $18.

The new 100-ton cyanide plant of Wayside Consolidated Gold Mines, Bride River district, is far advanced, expectation being that it will be ready to start operations during the first week in October.

It has finally been decided to install a Hadsell mill as a crushing unit and foundations for it and all other machinery have already been poured.

SCHOOL PATROL SAFETY PRAISED

The national board of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, at its meeting in Chicago, did not voice a general criticism of the School Traffic Patrol as a danger to children engaged in the work, contrary to general opinion.

This was pointed out by Mrs. Hugh Bradford of Sacramento, a member of the national board, who was present at the Chicago meeting when a resolution was acted upon dealing with the patrol movement. In a recent communication, Mrs. Bradford said:

"I am very much disturbed over the interpretation that has been put upon the action of our national board with reference to School Traffic Patrols. The board did not voice any general criticism of the patrols, nor did it condemn them as 'a menace to youth,' as has been reported.

"Every member of the board, so far as I know, is very enthusiastic over the work of the School Traffic Patrol and feels that patrol boys are performing a valuable function along safety lines, and that the results that have been obtained in a decrease of deaths and injuries among school children are ample evidence of the value of the patrol.

"It was found that in some large cities boy patrols were being used for duties which properly belonged to regular traffic officers and our protest was directed at this dangerous procedure. Naturally, this creates a very undesirable situation and it is that practice and that alone which the National Congress of Parents and Teachers criticized.

"I am happy to say that the School Traffic Patrol system in California requires the patrol boys to operate from the curb. In this state I believe that the children are properly trained and instructed not to direct vehicular traffic, but rather to guide and protect their schoolmates crossing the streets."

Mrs. M. H. Brady of Burlingame, president of the San Mateo County Council of the American Legion Auxiliary, entertained the council officers who have served with her this past year, at a delightfully appointed luncheon at her home on Tuesday of this week. Cards were enjoyed following the luncheon.

Guests included Mrs. Ethel Pontius of San Francisco, president of district No. 8 and, Mrs. Florence Donnelly, district vice president. Mrs. Helen Blunck, president of Burlingame Unit was also present. WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney
Next week, October 6 to October 12, has been proclaimed as National Fire Prevention Week by the President of the United States.

Somewhere in America, every minute of the day and night, a home is burning. Innumerable fires are constantly causing anxiety, heartaches, heavy losses and taking lives. Fire, as it keeps us warm and cooks our food, is a boon to mankind; but only when it is friendly.

Fire prevention is always a boon to mankind, for without this science of fire control our civilization never would have been possible.

Fire waste causes useless loss of life, of employment, of created wealth in property, and of commercial prosperity.

Every life taken by fire is a loss which cannot be measured by financial value, while every building in this country represents energy and money and when destroyed by the flames brings a loss to the community at large. The indirect loss involves interrupted business, loss of earnings of employees, loss to property owners through vacant dwellings and loss to municipalities through destruction of taxable values. These costs, even regarded solely in their economic effects, are beyond the power of figures to represent. On the other hand, anyone who practices fire prevention is definitely planning greater safety for his loved ones and himself. It is a known fact that thousands of persons lose their lives in fires annually; no one can think of a more horrible death.

The preservation of the home is a very real duty. Every member of the family shares this obligation.

Fire Prevention saves valuable homes.

Fire Prevention aids to stabilize employment by saving factories and stores.

Fire Prevention maintains insurance costs at a low level.

After reading the above observe this Fire Prevention Week, October 6 to October 12, by thoroughly inspecting your own home for any fire hazards and get rid of them, then continue fire prevention week the other 51 weeks by keeping your place cleaned up and do not allow the fire hazards to accumulate until another fire prevention week.
